IMPORTANT NOTICE TO ALL HEALTHCARE PROVIDERS BILLING WORKERS' COMPENSATION CLAIMS

MAINTAIN YOUR DELAWARE WORKERS' COMPENSATION CERTIFICATION

It is crucial that your workers' compensation certification be kept current in order to be eligible for prompt payment by workers' compensation carriers.

If you are a provider certified in the Delaware workers' compensation healthcare payment system and were originally certified on or before April 30, 2009 you should have completed two iterations of the mandatory on-line continuing education course. If you already completed both iterations, you are current and up to date until 2015.

If you were originally certified between May 2009 and April 2011, you should have completed at least one iteration of the mandatory on-line continuing education course. If you already completed your first course you are current and up to date until 2015.

If you wish to check your certification dates, or the dates of CME completions, the Office of Workers' Compensation maintains a list with the each provider's original certification date and complete date (s) of the continuing education course(s) on their Certified Providers

List, which is updated weekly and can be accessed online at: Certified Provider List

The on-line continuing education course is also available online at: Continuing Education Course

Providers must log into the course with a unique email address.

IF YOUR CERTIFICATION HAS LAPSED:

If your certification has lapsed, quickly complete and submit another Application for Certification along with current proof of malpractice insurance. You may download an application by clicking here: Certification Application.

Keeping your certification up to date will provide for more timely payments from the workers compensation payment system.

If you have any questions about this or any issue relating to personal injury or workers' compensation claims, feel free to contact me by e-mail at EricDoroshow@dplaw.com or by phone at (302) 998-0100.
